In a human-controlled Alpha Centauri system a large tree grows on Pandora – a lush moon that was previously thought destroyed – having been saved from the extinction event of 250 years before by the Engineers who created the moon. Scientists explore the planet Pandora and soon discover that it has a breathable atmosphere and an otherworldly ecosystem. However, the Na'vi things that live there believe that humans are destroying their world and ruthlessly attack. An international coalition of scientists led by Dr. Grace Augustine use flying drones to destroy the avatar's forest in retaliation, but is discovered by the Na'vi who seek to end the conflict. Na'vi shaman Dr. Newton is sent to Earth in order to appeal for peace between humans and his people, but he is captured by Colonel Miles Quaritch. With his assistant Dr. Max Patel trapped on Pandora, Newton is forced to decipher the local writing system which he eventually discovers is an extraterrestrial language. As Dr. Augustine had suspected, the tree on Pandora contains a fabled Tree of Souls that was planted by extraterrestrials called the Engineers. The tree's roots are connected to a monolithic structure on Pandora known as "the Heart of the World" which is emitting a signal that attracts more alien beings. A group of humans led by journalist Jake Sully attempt to mine for unobtainium while two Na'vi named Tsu'tey and Buar seek to protect their homeland from intruders, but are discovered by Quaritch who plans on sacrificing them for his own greed. In order to infiltrate the clan from which the Na'vi hunt from afar, Jake allows himself to be kidnapped by the sacred giant banshee known as Toruk, where he then bonds with and tames it like a Na'vi. After bonding with the creatures and acquiring their unique abilities and culture, he is given a chance to purchase an animal totem – a dragon-like creature called "Toruk" – which would allow him to blend in with his new kinsmen. He is approached by Commander Trudy Chacón's unit, but refuses.
